About the Course

Background

Early childhood is the first and most important period in a person's life. This makes the first years of childhood a period of great opportunity, but also a great risk.

The quality of a child's early experiences makes a critical difference in the development of the brain, the existence of strong or weak abilities for learning, health and functioning throughout life. Early childhood offers a critical window of opportunity to build a foundation for a child's future in order to realize his full potential, which is a human right. When children miss this once in a lifetime opportunity, they pay the price with lost potential by either dying prematurely or living with poor physical and mental health, struggling to learn or make a living later in life and we all pay the price. Early childhood education and development is the key that will allow many other Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) to be achieved. Giving children the best start in life supports the entire spectrum of the UN Sustainable Development Goals. By investing in quality early childhood education, we pave the road to a more equitable, sustainable, and prosperous future for generations to come.

Education in Israel starts at a very young age and most 2-4 years old attend some kind of a preschool environment. Most programs are sponsored by local authorities, some within day-care centers operated by women's organizations, others are privately owned. The Ministry of Education allocates special resources for preschool education in disadvantaged areas. Preschools for five-year-olds are free and compulsory. The curricula of all preschools are guided and supervised by the Ministry of Education to ensure a solid and well-rounded foundation for future learning. Governmental and non-governmental organizations in Israel, such as The Israel National Council for the Child (NCC) and the Inter-ministerial National Committee for Children and Adolescents at Risk, ensure that children's rights are protected, and their health and education ensured. These organizations succeed in changing laws and legislation in supporting needs of children in Israel.

MCTC has a vast experience sharing Israel's best knowledge, expertise, and practices in the field of Early Childhood Education and Development.

About The Golda Meir MASHAV-Carmel (MCTC)

The Golda Meir MASHAV Carmel International Training Center (MCTC) was established in 1961. MCTC was the first of its kind in the domain of women’s empowerment and since its inception has had a profound influence on both individuals and the policy arena. MCTC focuses on three areas of study: Sustainable Community Development, Early Childhood Education and Development, and Entrepreneurship and Innovation, all with gender as a crosscutting issue.

MCTC endeavors to provide professional women and men from developing countries and transitional societies with the necessary tools for women’s empowerment. MCTC enjoys the active cooperation of a number of international organizations, governmental and non-governmental organizations and development authorities. Since the establishment of MCTC, some 30,000 participants from over 147 countries have benefitted from hundreds of training activities conducted in Israel. Today, many of them hold key positions at the local or national level, or within the United Nations. www.mctc.org.il

About The Center for the Study of Child Development and the International MA Program in Education and Development in Early Childhood, University of Haifa

The Center for the Study of Child Development at the University of Haifa includes a group of internationally leading senior researchers who are devoted to the study of children's development, with a particular emphasis on their emotional health and well-being. The Center's experts focus on basic science questions regarding the nature of socio-emotional development across the life span and across cultures, and their implications and applications for the lives of children and their families.

The one-year International Master's Program in Education and Development in Early Childhood for Developing Countries, in the School of Therapy, Counseling and Human Development, Faculty of Education, was designed with the goal of improving the lives of children at risk around the world. It is designed to prepare the next generation of international experts who will focus on pressing questions regarding the nature of early education and development and how it applies to the lives of children and their families in developing countries. This unique program equips professionals with the knowledge and skills that are necessary when returning to their home countries to affect and influence the well-being of children and their families (for more details see <https://uhaifa.org/program/education-development-in-early-childhood/>) (details for the academic year 2025-2026 will be updated soon in this link. In the meantime, interested candidates may write to child@services.edu.haifa.ac.il).
