International Course on:

Small Ruminant Farming
Sheep and Goats as Multipurpose
Livestock Species for Meat and Milk
Production

Israel, 19th – 30th May, 2025

Background

The sheep and goat industry in Israel is an integral part of local agriculture, combining a rich tradition with advanced technologies. The industry includes approximately 2,400 farms managing around 520,000 sheep and goats, utilizing diverse farming systems. These range from extensive grazing, primarily practiced by Bedouin (nomadic) farmers in the south, to modern Kibbutz and Moshav farms specializing in intensive dairy and meat production.

Through genetic improvement programs, research and development, and professional advisory services, efforts are being made to enhance the industry's efficiency and sustainability. The combination of tradition, innovation, and expert support positions Israel as a global leader in the field and a key hub of expertise.
